VOLUME L. NUMBER 32.

Bottom the other day gave "Rev." Billy Sunday and Prohibition the cold shoulder by a vote of nearly two to one.

OUR Baptist brethren in Texas want Congress to deliver a reprimand to Gen. Funston because he refused "evangelists" permission to hold revivals within his camp lines. He rightly held they would disturb military routine, but what of that? Your "evangelists" being of heaven heavenly, can take no account of things earthly—if we except, perhaps, the contribution box. Shall we hike back to the days of Oliver Cromwell?

DAMNABLY un-Democratic, I hold, is the measure referred to by the Post-Dispatch in an editorial printed on the first page of this paper. Read it and see, if it is adopted by Congress, how much of our boasted "Liberty of the Press" will remain. During the days of Republican ascendancy I could look upon such enactments without being utterly cast down, for I had the comforting hope that in good time there would be a turn in national affairs and the faith of the fathers would prevail. Am I to be shown that this was a vain imagining? That no individual has rights impregnable against the assaults of men "dressed in a little brief authority"? That in my calling I am but a child rightfully subjected to the supervision and correction of my servants in the role of masters? To be told what decent advertisements I may not print, and what others I must print, no matter how objectionable to my convictions and understanding? Good Lord! If a Democratic administration may enact and put in force such a measure, then indeed have I for sixty years been a fool, dwelling in the tents of the Philistines and knowing it not!

I TAKE the following from the Christian Science Monitor, a Boston publication:

"In certain parts of the rural West of the United States, following the example set in the word 'parsonage,' people are calling a home built expressly for the school teacher a 'teaherage.' Without dwelling upon the merits of the new word, one is impelled to say, considering the experience of rural teachers in the past, and to a great extent in the present, that the idea of building a home for the teacher, in connection with every rural school, is a commendable one. In Kansas such dwellings are being erected. One instance noted in the local papers is interesting. In this case the 'teaherage' is to have a neat cottage with outbuildings, surrounded by five acres of good land. Such provisions for comfort and independence should attract a better grade of teachers to the country rural and isolated schools, and thus be a profitable investment for the community and the State.

This is indeed "commendable"—only, it doesn't go far enough. The "home and five acres" is heavenly in suggestion, and no good citizen content to provide by his own exertion a similar habitat for himself can reasonably object. But, I repeat, the provision made for the comfort and well-being of the teacher falls far short of the ideal and leaves too much unprovided for at the expense of the devoted tax-payer. A double team and carriage—or better still, a standard automobile—would add greatly to the comfort and health of the teacher and his family. Then the necessary implements—planter, mower, reaper, etc.—for the expert cultivation of the "five acres," must not be omitted. A fish-pond and aviary, though not absolutely necessary, would give up-to-dateness and dignity to the "teaherage." Let us not make two bites of a cherry, brethren, but go "the whole hog," following the lead of that sacred and unapproachable institution, the Missouri University—the glory of the State and the complaisant receptacle of its surplus funds.
